BIOGRAPHICAL

He was a graduate of Bucknell College (1860) and the law department of Harvard. He began the practice of law in Union County, PA.

On 19 Apr 1861, he went out as first Sergeant of the company from Lewisburg, PA, of which, his brother John W. Chamberlin, was Captain (Fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers). At the end of his three months enlistment, he recruited a company for three years, Company D of the 52nd Pennsylvania Volunteers. He was wounded in the breast at the battle of Fair Oaks, but remained with his company and was treated by the regimental surgeon. He contracted Malaria fever while serving on the Carolina coast under Burnside and resigned his commission in May 1863. In July 1863, he came into the field again as Colonel of the 28th Militia, and was at Carlisle when it was shelled by Fitzhugh Lee's cavalry. In the autumn of 1863, he went to Nashville, TN.

He was appointed by Governor Curtin as Military Agent of Pennsylvania for the southwest, looking after the welfare of the Pennsylvania soldiers in that department until the close of the war.

He formed a law partnership with D.F. Wilkin, Esquire, of Nashville, TN.
