BIOGRAPHICAL

For several years Hiram Barnum was proprietor of the Summer's hotel at what is now Summersville, Susquehanna Co., PA, which, during their stay, was noted for its good tables and was much frequented by the young people and pleasure seekers. Then getting the "western fever," they, in company with his brother Horace and wife, went west, but sickness in their families brought them back to Pennsylvania. For several years, he ran the hotel at Clifford Corners. Later, they removed to what is now Hallstead, PA, where they spent the remainder of their lives.

The lack of jurisdictional information provided by the Wright-Chamberlin Genealogy (major source) makes it nearly impossible to lend any confidence in guessing where family events took place.
