BIOGRAPHICAL

Jeremiah Coleman's American ancestors were Philip¹ Kulmer, emigrant from Germany in 1710, Joannes² Kulmer (in German) or John kilmer (in English), Wilhelmus³ Kulmer, baptized at East Camp, now Germantown, NY, in 1746. He kept a notebook which was made of white birch bark, the writing within was in German. William⁴ Kilmer, baptized February 7, 1775; left New York and settled near Dundaff, PA, where by some means his surname was changed to Coleman.

They began housekeeping on his farm which lay on the west side of East Mountain in Susquehanna Co., PA. Selling this place, they removed to the George Walker farm in Dimock township, same county, in 1858, where she remained until the spring following his death, when she and her son moved to the farm her husband had bought adjoining the Dimock Camp Meeting Ground where she spent the remainder of her life. Jeremiah was an invalid for eleven years before his death and besides caring for him, Diana kept the home work going, cooking for the farm hands, helping milk, and making butter from twenty cows. December 11, 1903, found her the only surviving child of her father's family.
